

We help you with differences and comparisons of terms, products, and services.

Difference Between APA and MLA

1. In APA style, four sections are there i.e. page title, an abstract of the research, body paragraphs with headings/sub-headings, and list of references. Whereas, in MLA style, only two sections are there i.e. body in paragraph format and work cited pages. In MLA, page title and an abstract are not included.
2. In APA style, an in-text citation is in author-date format, whereas in MLA style, in-text citations are author-page format.
3. In APA, the author's last name is mentioned with publishing date/year in parenthesis, whereas in MLA, the author's name with the page number is cited.
4. Page referred in APA are mentioned in the end in a single page as "References", whereas in MLA it is mentioned as "Work-Cited".
5. APA format is used for social science like Sociology, Psychology, Nursing, Social Work, Criminology, Business, and Education, etc. Whereas MLA format is used for humanities like Literature, History, Language, Arts, Philosophy, Theatre, Religion, Law, Anthropology, Politics, etc.

Source and more details: <https://askanydifference.com/difference-between-apa-and-mla/>