Difference Between China and Japan

1. Being on the Asian Continent, the two countries share many similarities, like earthquakes and storms. However, there are many differences between the two, the major difference between China and Japan is, China follows the Communism as the form of governance where a lot of things are restricted to the Chinese nationals, whereas Japan follows constitutional monarchy and is way too liberal when compared to the restrictions for the Chinese.
2. China is a strict communist country, wherein a lot of people in China do not follow any religion whereas the Japanese are religious, they follow a religion called Shintoism.
3. China is comprised of many ethnic groups like the Mongolians, Koreans, Vietnamese, Russians, and the Manchus, while Japan is completely homogenous, most of the people live in Japan are descendants of the same countrymen.
4. The official language of China is called Mandarin while Japanese is Japan's national language.
5. Japan is a country with very minimal to zero natural resources, they thrive in trade mostly. China, on the other hand, is rich in natural resources.
