

AskAnyDifference.com

We help you with differences and comparisons of terms, products, and services.

Difference Between Cows and Heifers

1. A cow is a mature female bovine while a heifer is an immature offspring of a cow.
2. Both of them come from bovine family, but heifers are the female calves of a cow that grow up to be cowed.
3. A cow can reproduce it's own younger ones since it has matured organs for reproduction. However, heifers are unable to do so because of their immaturity.
4. Heifers do not have udders and prominent nipples. But the vulvas of cows are large enough for insemination and can thus get pregnant.
5. Heifers attain 50% of the total weight that they can attain in their lifetime, at this stage. Cows are 1000 kilograms and this is just an average. The weight of a cow can vary according to its surroundings.
6. Cows can vary in size and physical appearances according to their environment. Heifers generally are seen with the same genetics of their parents.

AskAnyDifference.com

We help you with differences and comparisons of terms, products, and services.

Source and more details: <https://askanydifference.com/difference-between-cows-and-heifers/>