

We help you with differences and comparisons of terms, products, and services.

Difference Between This and That

1) The most distinctive difference between 'this' and 'that' is that while 'this' is used to indicate objects that are closer by, that is used to point out to objects that are far away or not within one's vicinity.

2) Also worth noting is that both 'this' and 'that' can also serve as adjectives, where they specify which object is under discussion.

3) Examples in a sentence:

- The car belongs to that woman.
- The cat ate from this plate.

In both of these sentences, 'this' and 'that' are used as adjectives. They're adding detail as to the specifics of the noun under discussion.

The word this can also be used to affirm.

- This feels right.

4) The two words can also be used together in the expression 'this and that' to mean 'various unspecified things'

Source and more details: <https://askanydifference.com/difference-between-this-and-that/>

AskAnyDifference.com

We help you with differences and comparisons of terms, products, and services.